White (E. L.) A popular essay on the disorder familiarly termed a cold; in which the means for obviating the various causes which are liable either remotely to contribute to the production of this complaint, or which more immediately excite it; together with the most effectual manner of removing it when present, are explained in a manner familiar to the meanest capacity; and to which are added a collection of approved receipts and observations of the most popular remedies, [etc.]. viii, 206 pp. 16°. London, T. Cadell & W. Davies, 1807.

———. The same. To which are added, annotations explanatory and practical, exhibiting a new theory on the action of many of the predisposing and exciting causes of catarrh, with original and approved receipts for the cure of that disease in the United States, by J. Stuart. xxvii, 248 pp. 8°. Philadelphia, T. & G. Palmer, 1808.
